Excerpt: . . . made the distributed Al Qaeda networks especially vulnerable to 16 destruction of network hubs. The strongest element of Sagemans argument was found in his careful examination of network nodes. His analysis indicated that the nodes were typically small groups of individuals, isolated from their surrounding communities and from each other. They were the product of local free associations rather than of a centralized recruiting effort by the hubs. While ties between node and hub were weak, ties within the node itself were very strong and quite resistant to erosion. Consequently, nodes were extremely difficult to detect 17 and monitor even for local law enforcement agencies. Other studies of terrorist groups have confirmed the main elements of Sagemans model while noting important new trends in the evolution of such groups since the terrorist attacks in the United States of September 11, 2001 (9 11). Jessica Stern has noted the movement of the Al Qaeda network away from central...
