Not illustrated. 1922 Excerpt: .Council and most people concerned, that full preparation for teaching physical education requires a college course of at least four years, and that the curriculum should be strong in cultural studies, basic sciences and educational theory as well as in the technical study of physical education. It is agreed that for the present, because of the serious shortage of teachers, courses of two years should be recognized in preparation for subordinate positions, where the teaching is done under competent supervision. The committee has not yet studied as long nor reached as uniformity of agreement when it comes to requirements of athletic and gymnastic practice. It is the belief of the speaker that two hours of such practice daily should be required of all physical education students, except in cases of physical disability, and that when such disability continues very long it should bar the student from preparation in this line. Students come to these schools with so little acquaintance with gymnastics, games and all lines of sports that two hours a day should be a minimum requirement. One member of the committee, a superintendent of schools in a large city, doubts the wisdom of attempting to prepare all teachers to handle all kinds of exercises suitable for pupils of the same sex, because of the exceedingly wide range of material the field affords. There is wide variation in practice and in opinion as to the best way to credit this physical practice in gymnasium, pool and...
