Comprehensive guide! Its this type of very good read through. It is actually written in simple words and phrases rather than difficult to understand. It is extremely difficult to leave it before concluding, once you begin to read the book.

Secondary instruction is imparted in 5 schools of. class A; the only one which teaches forestry alone has 72 pupils and 5 teachers, and costs about 800 a year. A course of a more advanced character is offered at Sapporo to graduates of middle schools, the subjects being algebra, geometry, trigonometry, analytical geometry, forest-mathematics, surveying, drawing, physics and meteorology, chemistry, geology, botany, zoology, hunting, agriculture, sylviculture, forest utilisation, technology, and protection, political economy and finance, elements of law, forest policy and administration, forest management, and German. The course covers 3 years. Japan in the Beginning of the 2uth Century, p. 284. The higher school of agriculture and forestry at Morioka -v offers a principal course of forestry, very similar to the above, and also extending over 3 years; the foreign language studied is German. This school has as yet no forests of its own. - Lastly, the college of agriculture at Tokyo offers both a main and a subsidiary course in forestry, each covering 3 years; the former is open to the graduates of higher schools, the latter to those of middle schools. The general arrangements have been described under the head of agriculture, as well as the facilities afforded for practical work in the splendid forests owned by the college. Chapter X TECHNICAL EDUCATION--(continuedJ. VI.--Commerce. 341. Geography, says Marquis Ito, has decreed that Indigenous...
